In view of further consideration, the Final Rejection of February 23, 2007 is hereby withdrawn in order to apply new grounds of rejection.

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 11, 12, 14-17, 19 and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Claims 11, 12, 14-17, 19 and 20, as written, do not sufficiently distinguish over branched sialo-sugar molecules as they exist naturally because the claims do not particularly point out any non-naturally occurring differences between the claimed products and the naturally occurring products. In the absence of the hand of man, the naturally occurring products are considered non-statutory subject matter. See Diamond v. Chakrabarty, 447 U.S. 303, 206 USPQ 193 (1980). The claims should be amended to indicate the hand of the inventor, e.g., by insertion of "Isolated" as taught by page 33 of the specification. See MPEP 2105.

Claims 11, 12, 14-17, 19 and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention.

On page 12 of the specification, it is stated that inventors of this application, by intensive studies, extracted a variety if sialo-sugar chains from tissues infected with influenza viruses and investigating the binding ability to the respective influenza viruses, thereby achieving the invention of this application. On pages 12-13 of the specification, a genus of formula (I) is disclosed wherein Hex represents any hexose, R represents hydrogen, hydrocarbon chain, a sugar chain, a lipid, a protein or a synthetic polymer. However, it is not clear from the specification which specific compounds have been isolated or how to modify said compounds to achieve the claimed genus. For example, it is not clear from the specification how one hexose can be changed to another hexose or how O-linkage can be changed to S-linkage. On page 13 of the specification, it is also stated that the structure of the R may be appropriately changed according to the usage of the novel branched sialo-sugar molecule of this invention. However, the specification fails to provide any guidance on how to select a specific R moiety for a specific usage. The specification fails to contain a written description of the invention, and the of manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same.

Applicant's arguments filed July 19, 2007 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
